THE WOODLANDS, TEXAS (April 28, 2014) – The Woodlands Township invites the community to Celebrate Every Drop at the first annual WaterFest, a free event to be held on Saturday, May 10, 2014 from 3 to 6 p.m. at Northshore Park.

The event will kick off with Flumpa, the tree frog and Wendy Whitten, the "singing scientist." This multi-award winning family entertainment duo is set to provide a delightful show for school-aged children and their families. Following this show, award-winner and environmental educator Jack Golden will deliver an incredible presentation that involves magic, theatre, and great humor with the water conservation message "Water, water everywhere."

In addition to these presentations, there will be various fun-filled water conservation-related activities and games for kids and families to enjoy. Activities include jumping for water conservation, discovering how astronauts conserve water, running through a stormwater obstacle course, visiting a groundwater demonstration module, building an aquifer, exploring fishing opportunities in The Woodlands and making a water meter to take home.

Come out to Waterfest for an unforgettable afternoon and walk away Celebrating Every Drop!
